

This is the information 286263 already has gathered now she has her access to external memory: information gathered or in my internal memory. The telegnosis roll was my attempt to be able to classify, connect and store information.

- Our hive knows about this facility
- I was supposed to acquire/archive something from here
- The whole hive is in a defensive mode of operation
- The dingo were not supposed to be here but something like the Seekers were to be expected from the external drive
- The facility should have been working
- Biomechs should have been here, but they would have had a different "naming" system
- The original way here is blocked, which is the reason we came through a "hole in the middle of the wall"
- The information I was supposed to gather is in data storage in this facility, further into the tunnels somewhere (map) from the data storage here
- Information about a whole lot of things that are extremely unfamiliar but connected to the initial purpose of the structure we use as a refuge right now
- Information about creatures that resemble us but are not found in the information I had access to previously to coming here

INTEGRATED INFORMATION FROM TELEGNOSIS

From the current Hive mission instructions and back-end database

- The Hive's current concept of this facility is very cautious: there is a contact-information protocol for you to follow, which matches the other records to some extent (and makes it possible for you to understand them better right now). The Hive also wants to know how well it is maintaining unique functions of some kind, which seem to you to correspond to the communications mentioned below.
- What to acquire, where, and how:
 - Genetic data analysis and old program specifications for applying it; this information is clearly Breeder-specific but no Breeder was sent with this team because the data must be delivered directly to Breeder 36. The Hive seems to have a problem which is supposed to be aided by this information.
 - Samples from the attacking forces, which is why Soldier 343990 was equipped with a web gun.
- The Hive has also provided data concerning the attackers which you are supposed to provide to this facility, to whatever one- or two-digit Soldier they may include.

From this facility's records at their most recent, which was a long time ago

- These "other biomech's" concept of the Hive: it is successfully self-sustaining, which seems to have been a goal, but also recently, unexpectedly large in population, even perceived as troublesome in that effective communication seems to have broken down.
- The facility's functions and priorities were to maintain the ability to communicate with someone or something else, and to seek contact with them, since the contact has been lost. This ability and also the capacity for some kind of mass transportation (a whole Hive??) was clearly in jeopardy.
- The facility is in sudden danger from an entirely separate attacker, identified as both automated and fully alien, and they are (at the time of this record) conflicted whether to enlist the Hive's aid or to cut off ties to protect it.

From an even older personal record, possibly included here by accident as a leftover file

- It refers to the attempt to establish a self-sustaining colony which was clearly not the original plan among the biomechs who recorded this, and also to new and strange phenomena – the biomech who recorded this seemed to have some kind of social disorder because they describe ordinary [telepathic, group-mind] communication as far as you are concerned.

- It includes a lot of descriptions, data, and quantitative modeling about some kind of non-biomech creature whose members are fully committed to a Hive and a reproductive “central” node to society – i.e., to you, something completely normal.
- This biomech also used strange self-references and obviously had some kind of disease or growth they were concerned with, tracking its progress carefully.

From all of the above information, you are able to track where you are relative to this strange facility, and also to understand its basic layout. You are currently located in the chamber in the tunnels at the far bottom right of this map.
