Contacts

Matthias and Jennifer Bleak	Parents. Mom hasn't spoken to me in a decade. Dad calls every couple of months. They haven't seen any of the profits from Specter Industries, the charity money after Apollo's death dried up fast, and they're back to living in poverty. I checked a GoFundMe they tried to run last year: it netted $83.
Jill Damerov	A childhood friend who's risen high in the Damerov crime family and who I reconnected with on the inside. I stayed sane by acting as a "human computer" for her -- storing all the numbers and logistics for her criminal operations in my memory. It's thanks to monthly paychecks from Jill into a secret account that my Resource Rank is "Excellent."
Samantha Sol	A young woman and now-single mother who served time for killing her abusive husband. We hit it off, neither of us are really sure why. I protected her as best I could while inside, until she was released a couple of years ago. I promised her I'd check in on her when I was out.
Teddy Baker	The love of my life, an average joe I was head-over-heels for when I was arrested. He never visited me or called, not once. I'm still carrying a torch for him.
Antoine's "Ghost"	My dead brother's voice in my head, sometimes externalized as a visual hallucination.
Dani Cox	Activist & union organizer working in one of Specter Industries' dangerous manufacturing centers, where exotic materials and horrible working conditions have killed multiple employees. She reached out to me while preparing for a recent strike in an upstate manufacturing plant, but I haven't decided if I'm going to call back yet.

Summary

Connie Bleak is a 45-year-old former wunderkind who grew up in poverty and, in a parallel universe, probably would have become a billionaire. She and her brother Antoine's specialty was constructing supersuits. Antoine took up the mantle of Apollo, on track to become another Iron Man. Connie ran tech support for Apollo and collaborated on a revolutionary phasing technology. They went into business with their childhood friend Ed Kalmar, a math & metrics whiz they met in a Gifted program.

Connie discovered that Antoine and Ed were planning to sell the siblings' tech to an unsavory list of governments (the US included) and (the real sin) cut her out of the profits and erase her contribution. She murdered Antoine in a fit of rage and was imprisoned.

For 20 years, she's watched Ed's Specter Industries grow into a shadowy behemoth, all on the back of her density-shifting tech. A chronic anemia condition, inadequately treated in prison, has left her with Feeble Endurance and uncertainty as to how many years she has left.

Now that she's being released, it's time to take up the mantle of SP3CTR, ghostly avenger. It's not enough to just kill Ed - she won't stop until Specter Industries is a pile of smoking rubble.
