Now that all the madness is under way ...

Ancient ruin + wondrous structure (underneath another) + place no one acknowledges = same thing

- Which is why the bug folk relic is there as an old curio along with many others, and why it is concealing access to an ancient robot factory
- Might need a bit of context as to what the "door" to it was doing as ship's cargo, but one might posit a number of such things/places scattered about
- What might happen when the portal is used as material to make an abomination is anyone's guess

NPCs currently mixed up in all this

- Zakti, bug folk feared outlaw, Brizyc's ex-mother-in-law, seeking the treasure she considers hers
 - o The relic in the naga antechamber fits into the treasure; creates symbolism for Brizyc's heresy
- The imperial provincial guy Thirteen and the highwayman killed when they were "here" before, emblematic or corresponding to the naga monster
- Eww, ooze, Plop's ex-lover, now hooked-up with Captain Shenk probably managed to extricate themselves from the situation at this point

NPCs who might get invoked or drawn in

- The orb, ex-lover to our orb, "it was all a misunderstanding" quite likely, considering
- Seven, the intellectual robot highwayman, Thirteen's friend quite likely, considering
- · Twelve, Thirteen's robot sibling who revealed the terrible family secret and gave him the key, at least in reference
 - o The key opens the ancient weirdness portal into the lower tower
- Five, the holy robot who blessed Thirteen in prison in the name of the Great Castration

NPCs who are lucky enough not to be involved at this time

- The famous holy naga who cursed Shaal (maybe eligible to be dragged in)
- The magical ooze musician whom Plop idealizes (maybe eligible to be dragged in)
- Urulu, Brizyc's ex-lover relevant to be sure, but not actually here
- The high-ranking imperial who committed a crime, known only to the orb; knows the ooze NPC below and probably collusive with them
- The wealthy ooze religious leader whose house was guarded by Plop and the orb, accused of criminal hypocrisy by
