

Something is very wrong and feels as if it's consuming you. Sudden changes in your heartrate, bursts of anger and strange dreams you don't remember – and you thought puberty was long behind you.

But Christmas prom is almost here and you somehow have to keep it together just a little longer. Even the U.S. president-elect will be there with his entourage, as will many of his biggest donors – the parents of your classmates, the kind of people your parents aspire to be.

You don't have to become the prom queen / king, but anything except a respectable showing tomorrow night, and your parents will kill you. They've been breaking their backs – metaphorically, of course – to afford Boston's most prestigious private school for you, paying for class trips to Antarctica, Gucci uniforms and more.

Create an upper-class teenager slowly consumed by an alien parasite. The GM will provide the details on the parasite later, so just focus on your teenage character: Write 50 words or less to describe anything about their appearance, origins, relationships, talents, viewpoints or what they want (besides surviving prom night).

- Martin